FSA NUTRITION CARD NOW ACCEPTED AT WALMART

FSA TPA is pleased to welcome Walmart as its latest merchant to its expansive Nationwide EBT network of retailers. The FSA Nutrition card is a valuable tool for Tribal Nations looking to provide Nutrition benefits to their Tribal citizens in a secure and convenient manner.

As an American Indian-owned firm working in Indian Country, FSA TPA is committed to helping Tribes build food-stable communities. We know how expensive and time-consuming administering nutritional benefits can be. That's why we have developed a simple, secure, and cost-effective solution that allows you to efficiently distribute, support, and manage your nutritional assistance program for eligible tribal members.

"The FSA Nutrition card is designed to meet the administration and documentation needs of tribes wanting to provide nutrition benefits to their citizens. We are excited that Walmart is joining the large group of grocery stores accepting our card." Nancy Lowrey, Founder, FS Advisors

The Nutrition Benefit Program models the Federal SNAP Program Guidelines and works just like a EBT Food or SNAP card at the point-of-sale (POS) terminal at most Nationwide EBT retailers, allowing members to purchase only food items that meet the Federal SNAP Program guidelines.

The average US household spends 68% of its food budget on groceries¹. The FSA Nutrition card is an excellent way for tribes to support their citizens with this important component of their family budgets.

FSA is an American Indian owned company founded in 2005 with a mission to provide tribal-directed solutions for financial and administrative tribal government needs.
